Mindful Teaching Tips

Continue instruction about emotions with a similar method: identify the emotion with an audio track, a story, or a video clip. With your class, make a list of times when you might have that emotion. You can invite students to draw or write about these examples to help students relate situations with emotions, then share these examples with the class.

Teaching Transcript

Before You Listen

Think about being kind to a friend.
Tell someone nearby what you did to be kind.
How did you feel when you were being kind?

Now, think about someone you care about.
How do they show you that they care?
Tell someone nearby how you know that someone cares about you.
How does it feel to know someone cares?

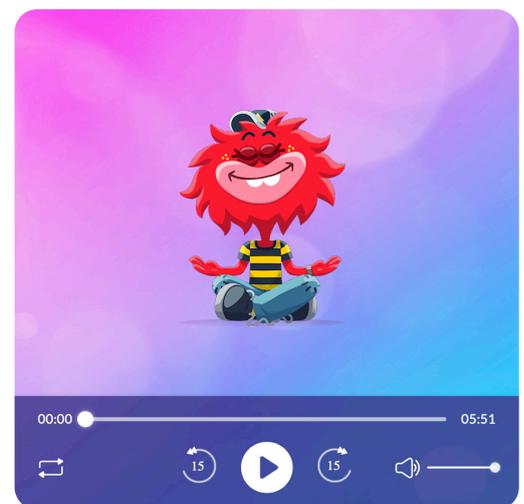

Today we will also learn about sharing.
Do you have a friend or family that is good at sharing?
Is it ever hard to share something? Talk about that for a moment.

(Bring the class focus to you.)

Now we will listen to a story called Kindness, Caring and Sharing with Dewy. Dewy is a friendly Moshling who likes to imagine himself in someone else's shoes so that he can understand how people around him feel and why they act the way that they do.
He is going to help us learn about what kindness, caring, and sharing looks like at our school.

(Play the track.)
What did Dewy learn about shoes?
What does it mean to imagine yourself in someone else's shoes?

Dewy imagines himself in someone else's shoes, and thinks about how someone else might be feeling.

Let's answer some questions together:

How can we be kind to each other?

How can we show that we care about each other?

How can we share with others?

(Write down the list on chart paper, if available, or write down the list and transfer it to the whiteboard, a slide, etc. in preparation for Lesson 2 activity.)
